Where every job stands

Each bar is one kind of job, scaled to its own total so the proportions line up — the single-size rows count one job per tune across all 2, the last two count one per arrangement size and per instrument. Read the top row first: it is the one that matters.

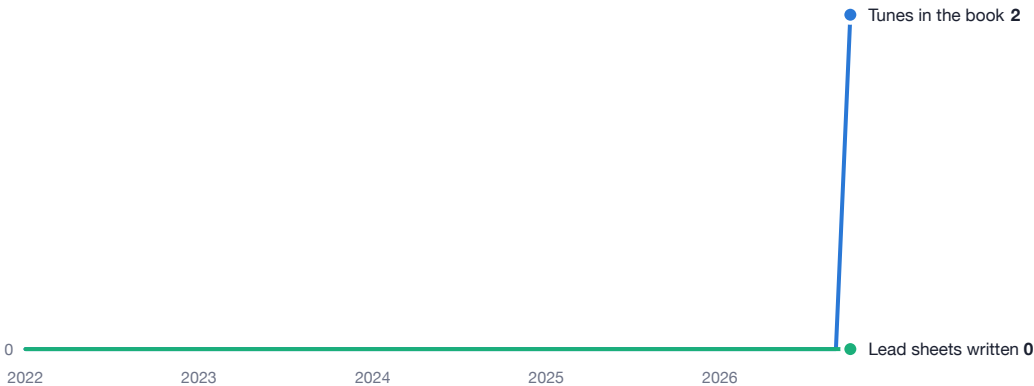

■ Done ■ Started — blank, score-only or runs short ■ Not started

How the book filled up

Dated from the files themselves — each tune counted from its oldest surviving file, each lead sheet from the oldest copy in that tune’s Version History. The gap between the two lines is the backlog. Rhythm and 3-horn charts are not plotted: the old parts are filed per player (song name, then the player’s name), so nothing in them says which arrangement they belong to, and a line drawn from that would be invention.

The checklist

Every outstanding task, highest priority first. Within each band, tunes are ordered by how often Starsign plays them — plays in 2025 plus 2026, from setlist.fm. The figures on the right are 2025 / 2026.

Tunes with a 3H Any Horns chart rather than a dedicated Tpt/Alt/Ten one count as done here — those cover the same three chairs, so rewriting them for named horns is optional polish, not a gap.

3-horn arrangements2 TASKS

Trumpet / alto / tenor, occasionally swapping the alto for something else. The whole point of the exercise — nothing else matters until these exist. Tunes with no 4-horn arrangement either come first: there is nothing at all to play them from, whereas a 4-horn chart can be cut down at a pinch.

5-, 6- and 7-horn arrangements plus keys, drums and percussion. Priority between these is nebulous — they are ordered by how often the tune gets played, so work top-down or follow your nose.

NOT COUNTED

Not on the checklist, but these are all live options whenever you want a change of pace:

- Big band charts — 5 sax / 4 trumpet / 4 trombone / rhythm. Folder name: Big Band.
- Orchestral arrangements — folder name: Full Orchestra.
- String quartet and quintet — folder names like 4S 2Vln Vla Vc.
- Marching band arrangements — folder name: Marching Band.
- Sellable versions of the sheets — a project in its own right. Every chart would need a fine-toothed pass for engraving, consistency and correctness before it could go out under your name.
